Three Journeymen Righthanders Were The Stars Of Opening Games Monday In Major League; Left Handers Have Hopes

By NORMAN MILLER

Three journeymen righthanders named John F. Kennedy, Art Mahaffey and Bennie Daniels were the stars of Monday's major league games, and some left-handed old pros like Warren Spahn, Whitey Ford and Johnny Podres would be happy to do as well today.

This is a big day in baseball's relentless push to new frontiers. It's the day when the major leagues invade Texas; the Los Angeles Dodgers play for the first time in their long-awaited million dollar super-stadium; and Casey Stengel starts learning the truth about his New York Mets.

President Kennedy cut loose with his best high hard pitch to usher in the 1962 season Monday and then settled back like Mr. Everybody Fan to watch Daniels pitch the Washington Senators to a five-hit, 4-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Phil's Runt Reds In Monday's other opener, at Cincinnati, Mahaffey scattered nine hits in pitching the Philadelphia Phils to a 12-4 victory over the Reds, last year's National League champions.

At the present moment, the Senators and Phils are alone atop the standings in each league. But it's probably the last time that will happen this season.

Mr. Kennedy's presidential pitch at Washington was recovered by Marty Kutyna, Senators pitcher who out-ambled his teammates as the ball rolled along the first base foul line.

The President then was chased to cover by a rainstorm which delayed the game for 22 minutes and later was nearly beamed by Willie Tasby's foul ball in the fourth inning. But he ducked, came up smiling and stayed to the final out of the game.

Bob Johnson, young Washington shortstop, hit a two-run homer in the fourth off lefty Don Mossi and received some hearty applause from the President and the rest of the crowd of 44,383. This was the largest turnout ever for a baseball game in the nation's capital.

Errors Help Senators After an error by second baseman Chuck Cottier of the Senators helped the Tigers score a run off Daniels in the sixth, Washington clinched matters with two more runs in the seventh. Hits by Cottier and Bob Schmidt, two Detroit errors and a single by Daniels produced the Senators' two runs off Ron Kline.

At Cincinnati, a crowd of 28,506 watched Clay Dalrymple and Don Demeter hit home runs in Philadelphia's 15-hit attack. The Phils routed Joey Jay with six runs in the third. Dalrymple's bases-empty homer, off Jay in the second inning, was the first in the majors this season.

Today's schedule in the National League pitted the Reds at Los Angeles; the Milwaukee Braves at the San Francisco Giants; the New York Mets at the St. Louis Cardinals; the Chicago Cubs at the Houston Colts; and the Phils at the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In the American League, it was the Baltimore Orioles at the New York Yankees; the Cleveland Indians at the Boston Red Sox; the Los Angeles Angels at the Chicago White Sox; and the Minnesota Twins at the Kansas City Athletics. Washington and Detroit were idle.

Open New Stadium A capacity crowd of 36,000, including Commissioner Ford Frick, was expected to jam Los Angeles' model Chavez Ravine Stadium for the Dodgers' opener. Podres was opposed by Jim O'Toole of the Reds.

Houston will make its major league debut in a rainbow-colored temporary 35,000-seat stadium. Bobby Shantz, one of the grab-bag players selected by Houston in stocking the new club last fall, will start for the Colts, with Don Gardwell pitching for Chicago.

The Mets, not due to open at home until Friday, will shoot Roger Craig against the Cardinals. Barry Jackson in the only night game on the program at St. Louis, Spahn, a 21-game winner last season, will start for Milwaukee against San Francisco's Juan Pizarro. Whitey Ford, with a record last year, will be the Yankees' home pitcher against the Orioles.

Hostesses for the event held on Tuesday, March 27 at seven o'clock in the evening were Miss Evelyn Geurin, Miss Gail Trass, and Mrs. John Tucker.

The honoree chose to wear for the occasion a lovely black dress with white accessories. Her corsage, gift of the hostesses, was of pink carnations.

Games were played and prizes were won by Mrs. Dorothy Roach, Mrs. Lora Jones, Mrs. Ann Taylor, and Mrs. Evelyn Donelson.

Refreshments of bridal cake and punch were served from the tea table covered with a white lace cloth over pink and centered with pink roses and white candles. Fifty guests were present and a number of others sent gifts.

Immediately following the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Cherry left for a brief Southern wedding trip.

They will make their home on Robin Road.

The bride attended Bowling Green Business University and Austin Peay State College. She is presently a student at Murray State College. Mr. Cherry is also a student at Murray State College where he is a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Miss Sylvia Tucker And Larry Harris Married Recently

The marriage of Miss Sylvia Tucker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Tucker of Kirksey, and Larry Harris, son of Mrs. Ruby Harris and the late Rupert Harris of Murray Route Six, was solemnized on Saturday, March 31, at one-thirty o'clock in the afternoon.

Rev. Terry Sills performed the ceremony at his home.

The bride was attired in a white chiffon street length dress with bouffant skirt and a jacket of white lace. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls and matching earrings. Her white veil was fastened to a white satin bow. A corsage of white carnations was pinned at her shoulder.

Miss Evelyn Geurin, a close friend of the couple, was the maid of honor. She was attired in a light blue street length dress with white accessories. Her corsage was of white tinted blue carnations.

Glen Harris, brother of the groom served as best man.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple left for a wedding trip to the Mammoth Cave National Park and are now residing at their new home near Kirksey.

Miss Lou Anne Drain Becomes Bride Of Ronald Lee Cherry In Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Lou Anne Drain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Drain of 38 Robin Road, Hopkinsville, and Ronald Lee Cherry, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Cherry of Murray, was solemnized in a simple but impressive ceremony Wednesday afternoon at St. John Methodist Church, Hopkinsville.

The Rev. Paul Keneipp read the double ring service in the presence of the immediate families.

Burning tapers in candelabra illuminated the altar which was decorated in greenery and ferns, accented by arrangements of white snapdragons and chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Keneipp presented a program of nuptial music. Her selections included "Always", "I Love You Truly", "Thine Alone", "Melody of Love", and "Oh Perfect Love". The traditional wedding marches were used.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a costume suit of aqua imported silk with matching veil headpiece. Her corsage was a white orchid.

Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Billy Beiles of Robin Road. Mrs. Beiles was dressed in a tuxedo s'k shanting model with which she wore a toast hat and accessories. Her corsage was a white gladiolus.

Mrs. Drain, mother of the bride, chose a navy blue suit for the wedding and wore aqua accessories. Her corsage was a gladiolus. Mrs. Cherry, the bridegroom's mother, was dressed in a lilac walking suit and wore a matching floral hat and white carnation corsage.

A Western Historical Novel The BURNWOOD MEN

CHAPTER 32
PIERRE LACROIX, Tam Barre thought, as aged ten years ago, when he saw the governor shake his head at Cleland Strike.
"Strike," Lacroix said, "I was an ambitious man, for myself, but mostly for my people. As Gabriel says, I dreamed dreams. I saw the goal so plain, so shining, it seemed within my grasp. Though I knew the kind of man you were, I believed your promise because they fitted into my dreams. But Gabriel says it more than truth. To kill to take our rights by force—we cannot build a nation or that, when the way of the law is still open to us. The whole world would turn its face against us. No, M'sieu Strike, the Bois Brûlés have no cause with you. Take your men and go." He stood with eyes averted and lips moving, as if he were praying.
Strike, wild with anger, kneeled his horse toward Lacroix. Gabriel Valier raised his arm, his fist closed. The arc of Métais started closing in, to the snick of rifle barrels.
"Strike, or Heaven's sake be careful!" Tam said. "Gabriel, hold the men back—let Strike go. Strike, get your men out before one shot starts a battle." Strike glanced around him. He saw that his men were backing their horses, facing the Métais, but putting space slowly between them. A bony man who seemed to be Strike's second in command held his ground. Strike said something to him in a low voice. The man rode over to the wagon.
Strike faced the crowd, his head high. "We'll go. We have no stomach for cowards and traitors. But there will be an accounting. Remember, Strike and Company expects payment for every last rifle, every cartridge, that I have delivered. Payment in full—in cash."
Tam gaped at the brassbound nerve of the man. With his world tumbling down around him, with complete disaster crowding all his reckless gamble, he still could flaunt that monstrous ego of his.
Then Strike's lieutenant came riding from behind the wagon, leading a pinto pony. Dove Demarest sat the pony on a clumsy squaw saddle, her skirts dragged high on ivory thighs. Her face was dark with the old bruises, and the flame of some new ones.
"Leave her be, Strike," Tam said. "She waits no part of you any longer."
Strike "whiffled" at the remark. "She's my wife," he said, regardless. Where I go, she goes. What I tell her to do, she does. Right, my dear?"
With cruel force he pulled her chin up. Tears were sliding down her swollen cheeks. Tam saw a dark line of dried blood over one cheekbone. But for just an instant Dove caught Tam's eye. She made the very slightest of negative gestures.
Strike backed his horse away from the wagon. "More than that, he said conversationally, "this woman is my insurance policy. We are riding east here, if you or the others follow too closely, or if anyone fires at us, the girl dies." He leaned forward, his face dark with rage, taking in all the crowd. "Do you understand that, you half-breeds?"

"Hut up, Strike!" Tam said. "Get out of here, before you say something that blows the lid. And if you harm Dove, I'll find you wherever you are. And I'll kill you."
"You? You hangdog little counterjumper!" Strike swung his horse, his hand going toward his pistol.
"No, Strike," Colly Devoe said. "Unless you want to die sudden. My advice is the mightiest same as Tam's—git gone before any friends have time to savor the rottenness of your crookedness. If'n they do, they'll skin you alive and hang your left of you up in the sun for the marauders."
Tam could feel the change in the Métais. Hostility toward Strike and his men was blazing high in these simple people, their betrayal biting at them, their pride trodden into the dust.
Strike must have sensed it as well. He rasped out a single epithet, jerking his horse around, he took the reins of Dove's pony.
With supreme contempt, he turned his back on the Métais, ignoring the threat of the ready guns trained upon him. Not a shot was fired. His men closed in around him. They rode east, the soft dust stirred by their passing drifting slowly away in the light breeze.
"That man will kill Dove, Colly," Tam said between clenched teeth.
"He's made a good start of it already, by the look of the poor thing's face," Devoe said. "We'll wait a bit, then we'll follow 'em. Not too close, either, for that devil meant just what he said. He'll kill her. And he'd like to suck us in an' put a slug in us, too."
They sat their horses by the head of the wagon, watching the Métais gather in small groups, to argue, to mill about, indecisively.
Colly said: "I better tip off the lieutenant. He's likely nervous as a cat by this time." He rode off to the south, and Tam saw blue-eyed horseflesh ride down the slope to meet him.
There was a lengthy conference, then Colly came riding back. The cavalrymen turned and galloped south.
"He seen most of what went on," Colly reported. "He'll git the captain to keep an eye on our boys, but there ain't nothin' to be feared of now. Tam, you're me an' Gabriel, we busted the back of this little war, danger by our jonesome. I'm proud of it."
"We did have a little help," Tam said drily. "Looks like Valier is going to wind it up."

Federal Judge John F. X. McGohery Thursday denied Sobell's petition and simultaneously turned down a motion for a reduction of his 30-year sentence.
Sobell was convicted in 1951, along with Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. The latter were executed for their part in the spy ring that conspired to give U.S. secrets to the Soviet Union.
